ARRIVAL OF SICK AND WOUNDED.

THE FIGHTING AT VICKSBURG.

The United States steamer Vanderbilt, Capt. LeFevere, from Fortress Monroe, 24 hours, with 56 sick and wounded soldiers arrived on Tuesday having in tow the ship Enterprise.

Since the destruction of the Merrimac the V. has been employed in the transportation of troops, horses, and army stores, also in towing Government transports to and from several points south. She left Port Royal July 13 for Fortress Monroe with General Stevens and Staff, and two regiments of his brigade, consisting of the 27th Penn. and the 8th Michigan; also towed the gunboat Phenix from Port Royal to Hampton Roads.

To the Editor of The N. Y. Tribune.

Sum—I have send you for publication an incomplete list of the wounded under my care at the Nelson and Gatewood House, of the battle of Monday, June 30. Tongue cannot tell the sufferings of the wounded from that eventful eve until a week from the following Friday, when we were all moved to Richmond, and placed in prison, notwithstanding we were paroled by Gen. Longstreet, on July 10, in accordance with the following note of instructions handed me:

July 10, 1862.

For your Service, in charge of wounded, I am instructed by an order from Gen. Longstreet, through Gen. D. R. Jones, to report to the Nelson House or Church, and parole all men found of the Union army, as prisoners, wounded and nurses. This has been accomplished so as to satisfy them by agreement, in the most expeditious manner.

To the Editor of The N. Y. Tribune.

On the following day we were taken off to Richmond in ambulances and baggage wagons, and incarcerated in Libby Prison and Prison No. 4, so called.

Myself, sick from overexertion and poor but little food, I sought private quarters, where I could recuperate, but was peremptorily ordered to prison by Gen. Winder, where I found a number of surgeons who had already suffered my fate.

During the following four days other surgeons came in, and were accommodated with the floor of the small room occupied by Col. Corcoran and Congressman May as our bed and quarter. The main floor of the prison was occupied by wounded officers, and the cellar beneath as cook-room, wash-room and dead-house. But my exhausted condition will not allow me to give you further particulars at present. On the 18th about 100 wounded and sick were taken to the James River, where the Louisiana awaited us, with the Stars and Stripes flying to the breeze.
